

NZ Innovation Barometer - how your organisation can be involved

The NZ Innovation Barometer provides government organisations with visualised data and insights on their innovative ability. The team then works with organisations to co-develop actions and case studies to improve. With year-on-year data, organisations can track progress over time, benchmarked against other organisations.

After successfully running the Innovation Barometer with nine government organisations, we are excited to offer the Innovation Barometer to a wider audience in 2022. Organisations can see how the Innovation Barometer aligns with their priorities. Ministry of Health Group Manager of Emerging Health Technology Jon Herries says “The health reforms have identified that innovation is a key part of the new operating model and the Innovation Barometer will help us understand where we need to make improvements.”

The process

We see a future where the NZ Government is the global leader of innovative problem solving, working collaboratively with citizens and across the public service. The organisations we’re working with share this vision. “We are doing the change that the Innovation Barometer pointed out we needed, and doing it in a programmatic way.” - Thomas Murray, MFE.

As a result of the Innovation Barometer process, organisations have taken steps to improve their innovation environment. Some of the focus areas for these organisations are:

- Capability building in innovation concepts.
- New roles to support innovation such as a new digital literacy role.
- Partnerships with CHQ through the NZ GovTech Accelerator.

Through this process, organisations are gaining a broader understanding of innovation and a language to articulate the cultural change they aim to achieve.

To learn more about participating in the Innovation Barometer, email the Programme Director at innovationbarometer@creativehq.co.nz. The team can do one-on-one meetings or present to your whole team before you receive the Participation Manual. Follow us on LinkedIn to stay up-to-date with our case studies of innovative projects, videos and upcoming events. The Innovation Barometer is a programme of Creative HQ, a wholly-owned subsidiary of WellingtonNZ working to support the smart people in government.

Short explainer video here.